

ABSTRACT

An interface connectable as a default host to a peripheral or as a default peripheral to a host, for serial data communication between host and peripheral during a session, and comprising: automated means for periodically checking a connection by periodically starting a session when connected as a default host and automated means for periodically checking a connection by periodically requesting a session when connected as a default peripheral.

Fig. 1